VOL. XXVII. SALEM, N. C., FEBRUARY 20, 1879. NO. 8.

The Gilt Mask.

Two young noblemen were seated on the piazza of a palace in Seville.

'What you tell me, Eustace,' said the elder, 'is sufficiently romantic to have originated in the brain of the Knight of la Mancha.'

'Yes; you know how I have been one of the favored suitors of Blanche La Meda, the handsomest and wildest woman in Seville. I thought my heart was given up to her—but the mysterious mask I encountered at the Duke's ball charmed me.'

'Faithful Eustace!' cried his companion, laughing. 'Doubtless you adore both Blanche and her rival, who refused to show her face.—'Tis hard to choose, I fear.'

'It would so appear, for yesterday I received a note warning me that I had incurred the hatred of lady Blanche, and that I must be on guard against assassins. Last night, as I was returning home, on passing under the piazza of the Marquis D'Almonte, an assassin sprang from behind a pillar, and would undoubtedly have murdered me had not a slight boy-like figure interposed to ward off the blow.—The cowardly villain then fled, but when I turned to thank my deliverer she had fled.'

'She?'

'Yes; for, though I got but a momentary glimpse of her, yet the shape of the figure, and the long tresses which had fallen from beneath the cap she wore, convinced me that I had been saved by a woman. Although the note I had received was unsigned, yet it was written in a delicate female hand.—Can I doubt that my savior and the mask are one?"

'Well, then your course is plain. Discover your inamorata, and if she is worthy of you, marry her. It is plain that she loves you.'

'It is impossible; the estates of the De Leons and the Del Montes join together. The Marquis Del Monte has a daughter Maria, said to be very beautiful, but I have not seen her for years. In early life we were betrothed, and our marriage is inevitable.'

Fernando remained buried in deep thought for a few minutes.—At length he said:

'Eustace, you must crush this strange attachment for one whom you have never seen. Your honor is pledged, and you must wed this Del Monte. To avoid temptation you must quit Seville. A month's absence will efface the memory of this unknown, who is doubtless some intriguing adventurer, I will accompany you on a vist to your father's estate. Let us leave to-morrow.'

'Your counsel is hard, Fernando,' said Eustace, with emotion, 'but I feel it is for the best. I will even do as you say.'

The next day, to the great surprise of the good people of Seville, the gayest young gallants in the town, Eustace De Leon and Fernando D'Artois had disappeared.

A couple of days' ride, and Eustace was once more domiciled beneath the roof of his forefathers, to the great delight of the Count. The latter also cordially welcomed the friend of his son. The Marquis Del Monte called over during the morning, and was surprised and pleased to meet Eustace.

After dinner Eustace accompanied the Marquis to visit his betrothed. The old gentleman, after conducting him to the entrance of her boudoir, merely said:

'Maria, your old playmate, Eustace De Leon,' and pushing him in, retired, leaving the young folks to their tete a tete.

Maria was engaged in embroidery when she was so unceremoniously disturbed. She arose and bowed rather coldly to Eustace, saying:

'A fair evening, Senor.'

As Eustace gazed upon the lovely girl he fell madly and desperately in love, and all thoughts of Lady Blanche and the strange mask quitted his mind, as with trembling limbs he sank on his knees and declared his passion.

'Are you sure,' replied she, mischievously, 'that you love me as much as you say?'

'Can you doubt me?' he asked.

'But Lady Blanche La Meda! Is it possible that you have already forgotten her? That argues ill for your constancy.'

'Pshaw, Maria, I know not where you learned of my flirtation with Blanche; but be assured that she is not the kind of person I could love.'

'Well, I believe you, Eustace; but there is still another.'

'Nay, there you wrong me,' said Eustace, decidedly.

'Oh, faithless one!' she exclaimed, with a mischievous laugh; 'then you have already forgotten your inamorata, and preserver, with the mask?'

Eustace blushed as he replied:

'I see you have heard of my foolish attachment for one whose face I have never seen. But Maria, although I was fascinated by the air of mystery which surrounded her, I have never yet felt toward any female the same tender attachment I have for you.'

What need to further pry into the secrets of the young couple? Suffice it that when they separated Eustace had Maria's promise that the happy day should not be far distant; but as he rode home he was deeply puzzled to know how she had discovered his former peccadillos.

A few days after Maria took a fancy to spending a few weeks in Seville. As her will was virtually law, it was not long ere the Del Montes and De Leons were ensconced in their town residences.

A few days after their arrival there was a brilliant masquerade to be given. Maria expressed a wish to attend, and Eustace offered to accompany her; but her reply was that her father would accompany her; and that she would defy him to recognize her. He declared it to be impossible, and in return determed to disguise himself so as to prevent detection.

Well, the eventful night came, and Eustace was there early.—Earnestly he searched the room with his eyes, but although there were pretty girls in every disguise, he could nowhere behold the graceful form of his beloved. It was late; the guests had all arrived, and Eustace feared that something had deterred Maria from attending. He was about to leave the saloon when a French shepherdess, a new arrival, brushed by him, attracting his attention. Her mask was a peculiar one, different from the black and white usually worn. It was a gilt one, beautifully chased, and in the corner of the forhead contained a small silver star. It was the mask of the unknown, who had once saved his life. His strange affection for her suddenly returned, and forgetting his anxiety about Maria, he hastened to her side and soon led her to the dance. She conversed freely with him, though evidently in an assumed tone. Still he thought at times that her voice was strangely familiar.

After the dance the Mask excused herself for a moment and retired to an ante-room. Eustace waited some time patiently for her to appear, but at length a thought struck him, and he hastily entered. The only occupant was a Greek Fisher Girl, whose features were hidden by a white silk mask.

'My good girl,' said he, 'can you tell me which way a little French Shepherdess took?'

'Senor De Leon seems to take a strange interest in that mysterious mask of his,' was the somewhat bitter reply.

'Maria?' exclaimed Eustace, astonished, 'you here?'

'Aye; you might have found me sooner had not your eyes been dazzled by the gilt mask.'

'I assure you, Maria, that I searched earnestly for you.'

'It is of little consequence,' she replied coldly. 'I must go now.—I shall be happy to hear your excuses at some future period: at present, adois!' and she was gone ere he could reply.

Eustace sat down, feeling very miserable. His conduc was a sort of mystery to himself. While he felt that he had loved Maria as well as man ever loved woman, yet once in the presence of the Mask and he had eyes or ears for none else. He came to the conclusion that he was the most false and fickle of his sex; and while in this enviable state of mind he sought his hat and coat and left the saloon.

As he was about leaving the room a hand was laid upon his arm, and turning, he beheld the gilt mask—this time covering the features of the same boy who had before saved his life. The mask thrust a note in his hand and then disappeared in the crowd. The note ran as follows:

"If the Senor is really anxious to solve the mystery of one he pretends to care for, he shall be gratified. Let him call to-morrow at the old Palais de Rof, and he will discover who is

THE MASK.

Eustace re read the note, and as he was driven home he determined he would fathom the mystery which encircled the Mask. Accordingly the next morning found him at the appointed locality. He was conducted by a very ancient housekeeper to a bourdoir, the fittings of which although they were rich, were old and faded. Here the housekeeper left him to announce his coming, and for some time he remained alone. At length he heard a light foot-fall, and the page who had once preserved him entered. Eustace seized the little hand of the pretended boy and pressed it to his lips.

'At last I am to know thy secret, fair lady?'

'Stop a moment, Senor. Before I reveal my countenance will thou give thy word that thou lovest but me?'

The tones of the lady were evidently assumed.

A mingled look of shame and pain overclouded the countenance of the young man as he replied:

'Senorita, I feel that you will despise me, but I cannot give you the pledge you require. While in your presence I feel as though madly in love with you. Yet I experience the same feelings towards my betrothed, Maria Del Monte. Truly I feel that I am the most faithless of men, and am unworthy of the love of either of you.'

'You have at least one virtue, Senor—you are candid.'

'Well, your answer; am I still doomed to ignorance?'

'You shall learn in a few moments; for the present, excuse me.'

She left the room, and for a few moments Eustace remained brooding moodily. He heard not the light step that approached until he was startled by a voice which thrilled through every vein.

'Well, Senor De Leon, do you recognize me now?'

'Maria!' he exclaimed, starting to his feet.

'Nay, the gilt mask!' was the reply, in the old assumed tones.

Eustace gazed a moment doubtfully, then replied:

'I see the whole scheme, Maria. You cannot deceive me longer. I can now understand my strange attachment for the Mask.'

The next moment the blushing girl was clasped in his arms.

A little explanation soon cleared the mystery. Maria had spent the winter with her aunt, who lived near Seville. She frequently spent days in the town with her friend, Blanche La Meda, who was really a good-hearted girl. It was she who had persuaded Maria to adopt the mask. The warning note and rescue was merely a little plot of the girl's to win the young man's gratitude. His sudden departure frustrated their plans and compelled Maria's hasty return home. Maria's father was cognizant to the plot, and Eustace vowed it was not strange that he should have fallen a victim to the Mask.

Who Succeeds.

Evidently the man who tries! "Try" is the golden key that unbolts the strongest doors and reveals the hidden treasures. It laughs at difficulties, at opposition, finds success in failure, victory in defeat and triumph in every conflict. It spans the deepest chasm, bridges the largest rivers, tunnels the highest mountains, and by tiny connecting wires brings continents within a few seconds of each other. It has given to the world the greatest discoveries, the most wonderful inventions, and the most useful men. The world will never forget many of its worthies who have arisen from humble callings to a place among the wisest and best.

Roger Sherman, who was a member of the first Congress, was once a shoe maker. Franklin, the philosopher and statesmen was a poor printer boy. Elihu Burritt, the mathematician was a blacksmith. These men became great by dint of their own effort. They were self-made men. And, is not every great man a self-made man. He knows, better than any one else, how he climbed the ladder. Some begin on lower rounds than others, but all go up the same way, "round by round." Men do what they want to do.—"Where there's a will there's a way." None ever make life more of a success than they expect to make it.—Then how important to keep the courage up!—keep trying.

What purpose have you?
"Life is real, life is earnest!"

Aim high. Keep your ideal above you. Look towards it, aim at it, hit. There can be no failure. When his boatmen despaired of reaching land, Cæsar inspired them by shouting, "Never fear, you carry Cæsar." Have confidence in your purposes, yourself—and your God.—You have a better, higher inspiration, than any General could bring to bear upon his men. Be true.—Be good. Be right. Assert yourself in all good things. A slave is known even by his songs,—how full of bondage his plaintive minor air.

Let the sunshine, and genial air of happiness pervade your whole life! Develop mind and body.—Educate yourself! Mental discipline makes superiority. Seek wisdom, and remember that as the body so the mind does not become fully grown in one day. It was after six defeats that the seventh battle gave Bruce of Scotland the final victory.

If at first you don't succeed
Try, try again;
Get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding, and remember there is no success without effort.

Dawn on the Moon.

THE LUNAR WONDERS REVEALED BY THE ADVANCING SUNLIGHT.

[From the Rochester Express.]

A Rochester journalist who visited Prof. Swift, the other evening and had a view of the moon, says:

"The telescope, with a power of thirty-six diameters, was turned upon the moon. At first the flood of light was blinding, and the view was but cursory. The moon looked like a shield of embossed silver—the shield of Achilles—hung by his goddess mother in the azure of the heavens. Prof. Swift looked over the field and noticed as he looked many of the interesting points, and suggested that we follow the sunrise on the moon. On the moon the dawn advanced at the rate of ten miles an hour, lighting up new fields and furnishing to him an ever changing panorama. Still, there is naught but desolation, yawning craters, and sharp peaks of volcanic mountains and circular walls with perpendicular sides that surround deep pits.—The moon is dead to all appearance—burned out wit volcanic fires.—No water laves the desolate and rugged shores of its great sea bottoms. But in the gray plains where some astronomers think an ocean once spread, craters are seen with perpendicular walls.

The gray plains can be seen with the naked eye, forming what is called "the man in the moon," on a map like the eastern continent.—Under the telescope we would trace what seem at first to be shore lines on the borders of this plain. On closer inspection, instead of wave-washed sand, these lines appeared to be but rounded steps formed by successive lava bursts spreading over the plain and making, by the lessening flow, the gradual exhaustion of the volcanic force. From one of the largest craters rise three volcanic cones, the summits of which are tipped with sunlight before the floor of the crater is lighted. In another large crater two cones arise. From the larger craters rays spread out, as though the volcanic force cracked the firm crust in its upheaval, injecting the broken surface ridges of dazzling in white lava, that spread out like the arms of cuttle-fish covering a vast surface.

The Stolen Telegrams.

The Potter Committee has very properly directed its earliest inquiries to the larceny by which the dispatches were obtained, assorted, examined, manipulated and published. It is a piece of secret history which is disgraceful to all the participants. It is fully established by the testimony that the Morrison Committee of the House committed no theft and violated no confidence. A careful list was made of all the telegrams it received, and when they were returned to the Western Union Company a comparison was made with the list and the telegrams duly receipted for. There was a much larger batch of telegrams, some thirty thousand in number, which was delivered to the Senate Committee on Elections in obedience to a subpœna, and a deceitful pretence was made of returning them. They were sent to Washington in a trunk, and the same trunk was sent back, with an attempt to convey an impression that it was returned with all its original contents. That pretence is proved to have been a falsehood.—The contents of the trunk had been furtively searched and a large number of the telegrams stolen. Quite aside from the partisan uses made of that theft the transaction was infamous—deserving the same scorn as a tampering with letters in the Post Office. It is now in evidence that the sneaking theft by which certain telegrams were selected and retained and the others restored to the trunk was perpetrated by Republicans. The motive of the theft was to make party capital, and that motive explains the nature of the proceeding. Democratic dispatches were kept for publication, and such Republican dispatches as might offset them, culled out and destroyed. There is proof that some Republican dispatches were covertly taken out of the telegraph office and given up previous to the issue of any subpœnas. The president of the company was so ashamed of his order to that effect that he directed it to be burnt. The people who examined and sorted the contents of the trunk had shame but no scruples. They fished out damaging Republican dispatches to destroy or hide them, and damaging Democratic dispatches to convey them clandestinely to a newspaper for publication. When this use had been made of the preserved dispatches they were conveyed by stealth into the private office of General Butler in his absence and left there. The ghouls who stole Mr. Stewart's body did not conduct their operations with more studied secrecy of display.

FOREIGN SKETCHES.

Street Life in Pekin.

It is scarcely possible to imagine, without having witnessed it, the scene which the commercial streets of Pekin exhibit every day. The busy, bustling crowd, the horses, mules, carriages, hand-barrows and sedan-chairs, all mixed in inextricable confusion, and amongst them the itinerant dealers, some with hampers containing the stock-in-trade suspended around their necks, others standing before portable stoves on which they cook the viands they vend. These and many others are to be seen in the streets, not silently offering their wares, but endeavoring to attract the attention of possible buyers by shrill, ear-piercing cries, and loudly vaunting the low price and superior quality of the commodities. The barber with his little bell loudly summons all who have not performed their toilets to be shaved in the open air. He motions his customer to a low, seat, with one turn of the hand lathers his head, and dexterously performs with his triangular razor; he then paints his eye-brows and adjusts his queue, brushes his garments, and receiving a small fee, sends him away satisfied. Often a crowd collects to listen to a story-teller or a singer, to watch the tricks of a conjuror, or to hear of the marvellous properties possessed by certain drugs and remedies sold by loquacious quacks; but suddenly there is a stir amongst the assemblage, which hurriedly disperses or draws to one side, leaving room for the passage of some grandee, who, seated in his chair, and surrounded by a numerous cortege, expects all inferiors to make way at his presence. Guards of soldiers are stationed day and night in the principal thoroughfares, with strict orders to use their whips upon all, without distinction, who are disorderly or betray the slightest inclination to quarrel; besides this, every street is divided into sections of ten houses, which are each under the surveillance of one of the inhabitants, deputed by the authorities to fill the office of tithing-man. As soon as night falls, each householder, be he rich or poor, mandarin or mechanic, must light the lantern which stands at his door. At both ends of each street there is a wooden barrier which is closed at dark, and sentries posted at these barriers will permit of neither ingress or egress unless the applicant carries a letter and can show good cause for his absence from home.—Watchmen patrol the streets during the whole night, who, instead of crying the hour, show their vigilance by striking a bamboo tube every few minutes, causing a dull, hollow sound, which it takes Europeans sometime to become acquainted with and sleep through.

Travelling in Japan.

A long ride on a Japanese pack horse is an epoch in the life of any traveller. As the animals are shod with straw, and as the roads are very rough, they never attempt anything beyond a walk, even with the most violent inducement. The traveller is perched high up in a hard pillion, in a sort of valley, the sides of which are composed of his luggage, spare hats, shoes, girths and straps rolled into bundles; his legs are doubled so that his knees touch his chin, and the sensation is like that of being on the back of a camel. Thus placed, he must perform his journey, or, as an alternative, he may be driven in the Kago or litter. This may either be a basket slung on a pole or a regular box with doors and sliding shutters. The litters of men of rank, such as once were frequent enough in the town of Yeddo, but which have gone the way of so many remnants of old Japan, were often small rooms, gorgeously decorated and painted; but the litters which the ordinary traveller must use are of the basket type, and, as provocants of suffering and misery, are second only to the pack horse. To the native, whose normal position when not standing or sleeping is squatting on the heels of his feet, a confinement of several hours in a Kago, with scarcely a change of position, is no hardship, but to the European the agony of sitting cramped up in an arm-chair, with legs curled up, tucked in or huddled together for an indefinite time, it must be actually suffered to be appreciated.—Temporary relief may be obtained by sitting with the legs hanging over the sides, but in this case they either grace the ground or come in contact with the huge boulders with which the road is littered; or by stretching them out in front, when they strike against the coolie; or by stopping altogether and walking, which means loss of time, but which is the only efficacious method of escaping the pains of cramp. The Kago is, however, much more rapid than the pack horse, and far more economical. The coolies are well trained ours Scotch stalwart fellows as a rule, for to a Kago covering easily their five or six miles an hour, and resting but rarely. The motion, however, is very unpleasant, and is apt, like that of a swing, to make the patient sick.

Rare Diamonds.

The extraordinary loss by the Countess of Dudley a few years since, at a railway station in London, of jewels and, chiefly, of diamonds, valued at more than $100,000 in gold, through the carelessness of an attendant, brings out into striking light the extent of the investments made in this way by the rich and great in the Old World. These diamonds, enormous as their value must seem to be when compared with that of the finest jewels owned by opulent persons in this country, were yet but a portion of the "Dudley jewels," famous now throughout Europe. Lord Dudley, who was one of the wealthiest landed proprietors in Great Britain, has been for years a collector of gems and precious stones. At the World's Fair of 1867, in Paris, he allowed one of the leading jewelers to exhibit for him a single set of sapphires and brilliants belonging to his wife which was valued at no less than $40,000 in gold. Yet the "Dudley jewels," costly as they are, are by no means the finest private collection in Great Britain. The Dukes of Westminster and of Southerland, and Mr. Hope, are all understood to possess more and finer diamonds than the Earl of Dudley. The Duke of Westminster owns one stone, the Nassau diamond, a triangular jewel with rounded facets, of the weight of seventy-eight and five-eighths carats, which rivals in splendor as in size one of the most superb gems in the richest royal treasures. The Nassau diamond was originally taken by the Marquis of Hastings, the Lord Ravedon of our own revolutionary war, in the conquest of the Deccan in India. It weighs above twenty carats more than the famous Sancy diamond of the Duke of Burgundy, and is but little smaller than the scarcely less famous "Shah," presented by Conroes, the son of Abbas Mirza, Shah of Persia, to the Emperor of Russia.

The Shivering South.

An Alabama correspondent of the Philadelphia Times says: "The edge of winter has lapped over and covered the hills, lagoons and pine barrens of the 'sunny South' with a mantle of snow, and for the first time in a generation the natives of the Gulf States have enjoyed the luxury and novelty of a snowballing bout. It is impossible to present an adequate description of the excitement produced in South Georgia and Upper Florida, when Sunday morning revealed the unwonted scene.

"At Jacksonville and along the St. John's river the storm took the form of sleet, covering every exposed object with a strong coating of ice and rendering the streets impassable. The hotel men viewed the scene with alarm, and the invalid guests gazed from their windows despairingly, for their fancied security from chill blast was gone. Those interested in orange culture at all points north of Palatka have grave and well founded fears for the safety of not only the fruit now on the trees, but for young groves planted three or four years. Time can only demonstrate the havoc wrought in this direction. The hotel men have at least the consolation of knowing that the intense cold at the North will force an unusually large number of people to seek the milder States, and thus compensate them for the present dispirited effect the present weather must have upon their guests. The latter generally take the infliction good naturedly, and admit that, according to the rules of chance a repetition of this experience is hardly likely to occur again this winter. Many ludicrous stories are told of the effect of the snowy visitation upon the people and animals of these regions.

"Denizens of the woodlands came into the towns by scores to report the wonderful sight, only to find the panic universal. In the language of a citizen, 'It only needed a bob-sled and fur cap on the street to clean out a town and convince the natives that the day of judgment had come.'

"One old lady is credited with having filled a trunk with the stuff, to keep as a curiosity, and an aged negro awoke the sojourners at a favorite hotel with appeals for them to 'Look outen de winder an' see de dreffel heaby frost comin' down in chunks.'

"Horses generally refused to step from their stables. The weather to-day is somewhat milder, and the overcoats of antique and curious pattern which the emergency has called into service are again consigned to the limbo of things that were.

The area of the proposed State is very large—far too large for such a small population. Texas has a population of probably two millions and an area nearly double that of Dakota, but although the treaty of annexation provided for the construction of five States within its limits as soon as the population would justify such subdivision, it is probable that the Chicago Times and other journals, which are now eager to have Dakota admitted with its 100,000 people, would raise a great outcry if it were attempted to make five States, with a population of a million each, out of Texas.

SALEM, N. C.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 30, 1879.

CONSOLIDATION.—Several meetings of the Commissioners of Salem and Winston, of committees, and sub-committees have very recently been held, relative to the consolidation of both the above mentioned towns, under a city charter, to be known as the "City of Salem." Resolutions directing the city title of 4 wards, and limiting the taxes to 30 cents on the $100 valuation of Real Estate, and $1.50 on Road and Poll, were passed by a committee from both towns on Thursday evening last, three votes from Salem being cast against. LOCAL ITEMS.

ASH WEDNESDAY the 26th.

WILL BROWN is the new lamp lighter.

MUD! more mud!—the cry everywhere.

THE colored brass band is played out.

SALEM and Winston are becoming great horse markets.

INFERIOR COURT held four days and fifty-odd cases were disposed of.

IF you want a horse shod all round, $1 will pay the blacksmith's bill.

SATURDAY is the 147th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

EIGHT more days and the shortest month of the year will end.

JNO. REICH has disposed of his fine pair of match blacks.

A CALL-MEETING of the Reading Room Friday evening.

A LITTLE soap and water the street lamp casings are sadly in need of.

THE epizooty sticketh closer than a brother among many citizens about town.

To procure fertilizers read Joshua Horner's & Co's ad.

MT. AIRY prides itself on the champion cornet band, but old Salem's Silvers haven't yet forgotten how to toot.

FRANK REMPSON has closed out his share in the Winston tin shop and goes into the establishment at Mt. Airy.

Rev. Mr. BALDWIN, of Huntsville, has purchased the J. C. Conrad property, in Winston.

JUPITER is a Morning Star until the 11th of June. After that time it becomes an Evening Star.

SEVENTY-ODD street lamps there are in Salem and Winston. Forty-odd in our town and over thirty in Winston.

F. A. TUCKER, of Waughtown, is a newly appointed guager and store-keeper for this Internal Revenue district.

COMPETITION has reduced the price per day of livery turnouts to the reasonable rate of $2 for horse and buggy.

HEAVY SNOWS, it is said, seldom fall in the time for moonlight. Dark nights the fleecy flakes pile deepest.

A NEW post-office was established in January at Meadows, Stokes County.—Also one at Idol's Mills, Ashe County.

Rev. Mr. TRAWICK, of Kernersville, filled the pulpit of Winston Methodist E. Church, on Sunday morning.

"JUDGE SAMMY" P., has taken a respite from the perusal of Blackstone, and will spend some time in Salem.

REICH'S CHURN TERRITORY is going fast. Several States sold last week.—Call on patentee, Salem, N. C., without delay.

YADKIN COLLEGE will give its annual commencement for '79 on June the 5th. Our Cornets are wanted to furnish music and their terms applied for.

THE liveried darkey, match horses and flashy phaeton, looks real city like to be sure. It's a turn out from the new livery stable.

HAM, the Mt. Airy mail carrier, has deserted his hack till the roads are better and conveys the postal freight on horseback.

IT hailed, snowed and rained Monday. The snow fell about three inches in depth, with a respectable sleet thrown in.

MONDAY night the ice-covered trees were much admired as they glistened and sparkled in the rays of the street lamps.

PERMANIO RANK will shortly vacate his shoe-bench and travel as local agent for Capt. Reich's patent churn and egg-beater.

THE walking match mania has reached our city, and the boys are waiting for milder weather to get up one. Don't back, let's keep up with the times and have a turn at pedestrianism here.

WM. T. SHORE left for Warrensburg, Missouri, Thursday evening to appear as a witness in the case of I. G. Lash's estate pending in Court. Dr. Lash preceded him a week or more.

JOHN KESTER, the inventor of Tise's "Dairy Queen Churn," shipped a model last week, to the patent office, of a newly invented brick machine, capable of turning out 30,000 brick per day.

THE Baptist Sunday School scholars are elated in the anticipation of a pic nic or Railroad excursion, promised them when the balmy breath of spring is felt.

"THERE are few Saturdays but what the sun shines on," is an old saying.—We, out of curiosity, paid attention to the matter and found it was a fact.

THERE is a stranger's class at the Baptist Sunday School, which meets at 2 o'clock p. m. All who may desire to attend, are cordially welcomed.

Mr. BECK, of the livery firm of Beck & Moore, passed up town Monday, with 17 head of very fine looking horses and mules, just purchased in the Cincinnati market.

EGGS.—Monroe Thomas, (Price) col., lifted a basket of eggs from a wagon about the warehouses, Friday. Officer Cloud gave chase, and succeeded in recovering the property, but the thief, as is usually the case, escaped.

A traveling correspondent to one of our exchanges, writes thus: "While in Winston, I called at Smith's well kept Drug Store, where I purchased better and cheaper Cigars than I could find anywhere in my travels.

CHURNS.—Forsyth will soon gain notoriety as a churn inventing county.—The two very complete contrivances already turned out, have so far met with success, and a No. 3 model is under way.

STOKES COUNTY sent one lone darkey Buck Williams by name, to the Penitentiary for one year, convicted of larceny by the Inferior Court of that county, which met quite recently.

FRANK MALONE, col., entered Mr. T. A. Wiles' residence, in Winston, Thursday night, appropriating to himself a lot of provisions. Tom captured him next day and the jail has another occupant.

W. W. WORKMAN, a Good Templar of the Winston Lodge, will assist the Mt. Airy troupe in rendering that familiar old drama "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room." Will took prominent part in the play when given here, recently

N. S. COOK, Public Administrator of Forsyth, has been qualified and is prepared to settle the estates of Michael Holder and Leodocia Harper, deceased. All interested, read his notices in ad. cols.

HOPEWELL Public School came to a close Saturday. A considerable number of persons were present, and so far as the school is concerned, every thing passed of very well.

There were some unruly persons on the ground, however, the worse for liquor.

REQUEST.—If any of our citizens should be so unfortunate as to lose property by theft, Charley, the police, offers his service in any way possible to aid in a recovery. He requests that parties who are raided upon, keep the matter dark, and confide to no one but him, as silence is often a great aid in the detection of thieves.

ONE cannot help noticing the beautiful and attractive display of silver-ware, as you pass W. T. Vogler's Jewelry Store, in Winston. The popular gentleman is also an excellent repairer of watches and clocks. If you wish anything in his line give him a call. See new ad.

THOSE keeping cows should not fail to give them once a week a mixture of brimstone, soot and ashes, as it is a safe-guard against distemper. Cattle noticeably prefer at times to slake their thirst from a road-side pool, than from a running stream or well, and stall-kept stock should occassionally be given muddy water to drink. We publish these facts as handed to us by a friend who gained his knowledge of them from experience.

IF you were so fortunate as to receive a comic valentine, Thursday, don't get mad. No body sent it of course. Ye local was kindly remembered on the occasion, by some friend who has a cultivated taste for the beautiful, though fine art was sadly imposed on this time. No matter, we like variety in our art gallery and paste up our share of spoils of February 14th, '79.

A horse attached to a buggy returning from the close of school at Hopewell, Saturday, became frightened, and ran away, near the residence of Joseph Knaus. The hat of the driver blew off, and while he was procuring it, the animal started off, with Miss Hattie Jenkins sole occupant of the buggy, who jumped or was thrown out before the animal had proceeded far, and escaped uninjured. The vehicle was considerably damaged.

HERE, where snows are scarce, stylish sleighs don't bother the brain. We saw several model looking cutters dashing about Monday, one of which was simply constructed by taking off the wheels of an express, inserting the axles through two wide plank, fastening them, and going ahead. Our boys go for fun—and bother little about appearances.

SHERIFF FOGLE turned over to the Penitentiary authorities Saturday, the following convicts sentenced at the last week term of our Inferior Court. Chas. McGee, to one year; James Carson, Ferrel Smith and John Finly to six years each. All for larceny. The latter were the negroes who broke in Rose's store, last fall.

SINCE Thorne's Comedy Company left Winston there has been nothing in the amusement line going on, but all lovers of fun should not care a straw about that since it has become a well known fact that—S. E. Allen is able to furnish one and all with Hardware of any kind, cheaper than it can be bought elsewhere in Western N. C.

HAPPY HILL has the new colored church organized, with James Transon as pastor Services are held at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Sundays. Preaching at 7 p. m. Wednesday, and Prayer-meeting at the same hour Saturday. There is a Sunday School in connection with the church which meets every Sabbath at 10, a. m. and has an attendance of 29 scholars. Meetings are held in one of the dwellings temporarily, until the new place of worship can be built.

THE ladies of the Presbyterian Church gave a very pleasant festival at Tise's Hall, Friday evening. We stepped in and took a good view of every thing.—Upon one of the tables there were some elegant looking cakes, tastily iced and very tempting to the inner man. The fair creatures who presided over this department looked their prettiest. At the oyster table there were a number seated enjoying a hot stew, splendidly fixed up. Some fifty-odd dollars, we are pleased to learn, were realized for the Church.

THE Reading Room will celebrate Washington's Birthday, by giving an entertainment in Salem Female Academy Chapel. Owing to the limited room tickets of admittance will be given the members for distribution. The programme will consist of poetry reading, by W. P. Ormsby; Reading of Washington's Farewell Address by H. E. Fries; an address by Rev. E. Rondthaler, with music by the Cornet Band.—Bishop De Schweinitz will close the entertainment, with a prayer for our country. The exercises will commence promptly at 7½ o'clock, p. m.

MONDAY morning, about 5 o'clock, an unknown individual knocked at the First National Bank building door and aroused C. E. S., an occupant, desiring food and shelter, stating that he had walked from High Point since the evening before and was cold and hungry.—But 5 a. m., and the get up in the cold, did not tend to give the suspicious looking wanderer a very cordial reception, and he departed, after inquiry, to the house of a friend. We mention the circumstance to caution citizens against stragglers who are prowling around at all times, watching an opportunity to make it pay.

CONSOLIDATE and buy Hardware of Allen, Consolidated you get better prices from Allen. Consolidation will leave more money in your pockets. i. e. if you all consolidate and come to Allen's for Hardware.

JOHN H. SHULTZ returned from Fayetteville, where he has been attending the Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias of North Carolina, on Saturday evening's train. He was the representative from Salem Lodge, as well as an officer in the Grand Lodge. The session was held during last week, and was an exceedingly pleasant one, which is not to be wondered at, as the courtesy and hospitality of Fayetteville are proverbial. The Grand Lodge, through strenuous efforts, has cleared itself from financial encumbrance, and now stands on a solid foundation. The Endowment Rank, a new feature, has given a great impetus to this already popular Order, throughout the United States. Salem Lodge is taking steps to have a Section of the Rank established here. It is represented as the safest, surest and cheapest insurance known.

The following are the newly elected officers of the Grand Lodge:

G. C.—John L. Dudley.
G. V. C.—J. L. H. Missimer.
G. P.—H. C. Prempert.
G. M. of E.—R. T. Scanlin.
G. K. of R. & S.—J. W. Phillips.
G. M. at A.—W. A. Moye.
G. I. G.—J. H. Shultz.
G. O. G.—Thos. Powers.

C. E. Crist was appointed D. D. G. C. for District No. 5., and John H. Shultz was appointed the same for Western North Carolina, where there is no Lodge.

The Grand Lodge will hold its next session at Fayetteville, February 1880.

CHEW Jackson's Best Sweet Navy Tobacco.

EAST BEND, N. C.
Feb. 11th, 1879.

Editors of the Press:—In November last, two tenants on the farm of the late Judge Pearson commenced a race, catching rabbits and killing squirrels, and at Christmas the excitement ran so high, there seemed to be some danger of a suit for trespass, and perhaps, of assault and battery, between the parties, viz: C. and R. However, everything was quieted down by the interference of Bob and Van, who proposed to blaze out a line between the parties. And this being done, neither of them was to set guns over the line, but each party contended that they would set their guns at the line with the mouth pointing towards the other's premises, and to-day the thing foots up:

C.—250 rabbits, 175 squirrels.
R.—210 " 150 "

Can your Davie County possum man beat this?

POETRY.

Be Sorry in Time.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

'Tis no use to be sorry
For the things that are past
When the moments are flown
And the die is cast;
But a much better plan,
Though now told you in rhyme,
Is to guard well your ways
And be sorry in time.

Your former experience,
Though sad as you say,
May be turned to account
In the future some way,
And may aid you, whatever
Your station or clime,
To be readily warned
And be sorry in time.

But if you keep slipping
And tripping along,
Never heeding that part
Of the past that is wrong,
You will never depend
On this part of my rhyme,
Save from shipwreck your life,
Or be sorry in time!

HUMOROUS.

Josh Billings' Philosophy.

It iz the natur ov genius to kreate ockashuns and circumstansis, which it iz the natur ov tallent to take advantage ov them, after they are kreated.

Dandys and poodles are first cuzzins; they should take turns leading each other with a pink ribbon for the edificashun uv the people.

I never hev seen a man or woman yet but what thought they could make a better showing than Adam and Eve did in the garden ov Eden. I wud just like to see a couple ov them try it.

Thar iz a kind ov propriety to all things; the innocent vanity of the peacock would make a goose look ridikilus.

So long az a man runs hiz habits he iz safe, (I don't kare much what the habits are,) but when hiz habits begin to run him, then look out for breakers.

The most ov mankind have more kapasity than energy; next to hot rum, lazyness haz et up more people than enny other one thing.

The most suckcessful men I hav met are those who never think enny honest thing iz out ov their reach.

I hav seen phools who made a better figure than sum wize men, bekause they knu how to ase their pholly to advantage.

Fine clothes are ov sum akount to everybody, and they are all thare iz ov sum pholks.

BISHOP EARLY.—The following good story of Bishop Early is told by the Rev. John E. Edwards, D. D., in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine: At the session of one of the annual conferences over which Bishop Early presided the pastors were called on, in turn, to give some account of their respective charges. It so happened that a young man well known to the Bishop had been on a circuit lying on the outskirts of the conference territory, who during the year had married a lady of property and who came up, to the surprise of the conference, with a fine outfit in the way of new clothes, kid gloves, glossy beaver, gold spectacles and a gold-headed cane. He was decidedly "stuck up" and carried himself with affected dignity. His name was called and he arose to give an account of his circuit. He proceeded to state that several new houses of worship had been erected, new congregations formed, a fresh impulse given to the cause of religion and that general prosperity prevailed on the circuit, and then concluded his remarks by saying: "And now, Bishop, if you will only give that circuit half a chance it will do well." The Bishop drew up his mouth and nodded his head once or twice, and said: "The circuit has had half a chance." The young man subsided and another name was called.

A genuine Yankee in San Francisco, having bored a new comer with every conceivable question relative to his object in visiting the gold country, his hopes, his means, and his prospects, at length asked him if he had a family.—'Yes, sir; I have a wife and six children, and I never saw one of them.'—After this reply the couple sat a few minutes in silence; then the interrogator again commenced: "Was you ever blind, sir?" "No, sir." "Did you marry a widow, sir?" "No, sir." Another interval of silence. "Did I understand you to say, sir, that you had a wife and six children living in New York, and had never seen one of them? "Yes, sir, I so stated it." Another and a longer pause. Then the interrogator again inquired: "How can it be, sir, that you never saw one of them?" "Why," was the reply, "one of them was born after I left."

A lady taking tea at a small company, being very fond of hot rolls, was asked to have another. "Really, I cannot," she modestly replied; "I don't know how many I have eaten already." "I do," unexpectedly cried a juvenile upstart whose mother had allowed him a seat at the table; "you've eaten eight; I've been countin'."

To classical student: You ask "If Atlas supports the world, what supported Atlas?" The question dear sir, has often been asked, but never, so far as we are aware, satisfactorily answered. We have always been of the opinion that Atlas must have married a rich wife and got his support from her father.

The man who unexpectedly sat down in a pot of glue thinks there is more than one way of getting badly stuck.

AGRICULTURAL.

Qualifiestion for Farmers.

For farmers, the country wants the most energetic, thorough-going and wide-awake boys that can be found.—Hence, if a boy is blessed with that crowning concomitant which moves the world—brains—let him become a farmer. Brains constitute the great desideratum in agricultural science at the present day. Fifty years ago, muscle was the essential requisite. Fifty years ago a farmer was expected to perform every manual labor of the farm by the exercise of muscular force, while at the present day he needs more than muscle to enable him to manage labor-saving tools and implements with skill and efficiency. When the labors of the farm were nearly all performed by the laborious and fatiguing application of human force, farming was irksome drudgery. But now, when teams and steam power respond to the bidding of the tiller of the soil, agriculture is the most agreeable pursuit one can desire. True, at some seasons of the year farmers are required to labor early and late for several days. Then, again, perhaps for weeks, they will have easy times.

PERSONAL ATTENTION TO BUSINESS.—Nothing but ultimate ruin stares that farmer in the face who does not pay personal attention to the minute details of his farm. There are a thousand small leaks about the management of an ordinary farm that if not closely attended to, will surely bring the most hard-working farmer to ruin and bankruptcy. A large portion of the farmers can attribute their present condition to no other cause than lack of close attention to the small details of the farm.—Close supervision of the machinery, tools, stock and their feed, a place for everything and everything in its place. No hired help is as much interested in attending to these duties as the farmer himself—such a course would in a few months or years at most, enable many farmers who are now on a down hill grade to again begin to ascend, and if persevered in will surely make headway against what would otherwise look doubtful.

DEPTH TO WHICH ROOTS PENETRATE.—Mr. Foote, in Massachusetts, has traced the tap root of a common red clover plant downward to the perpendicular depth of nearly 5 feet. The Hon. J. Stanton Gould followed out the roots of Indian corn to the depth of 7 feet, and states that onions sometimes extend their roots downward to the depth of 3 feet; lucerne, 15 feet. Hon. George Geddes sent to the museum of the New York State Society a clover plant that had a root 4 feet 2 inches in length. Louis Walkoff traced the roots of a beet plant downward 4 feet, where they entered a drain pipe. Professor Schubart found the roots of rye, beans and garden peas to extend about 4 feet downward; of winter wheat 7 feet in a light subsoil, and 47 days after planting.—Scientific American.

GOOD FARMING.—Talk about good farming, but if you want to see something that has been well done, go to the farm of Mr. Jno. McDonald, near Concord, and take a look at six acres of land seeded down in wheat. The field looks more like garden work than anything we have seen. It was ploughed and cross-ploughed, then harrowed until the whole of the field was thoroughly pulverized. If the laborer is worthy of his hire, he certainly ought to reap an abundant harvest—thirty bushels per acre at least. A bearded variety of wheat was sown. In addition to this, he has fine grasses and a lot of beautiful South-down sheep, and a pond full of nice fish, and other attraction, which would pay any man to look at who attempts to farm.—Concord Sun.

TO STOP RUNAWAY HORSES.—The Mexicans have a method of subduing fractious horses and such as are inclined to run away, which might be introduced with profit here. A hood or winker is so arranged that the driver or rider can in an instant draw it directly over the eyes of the animal, effectually blindfolding him. Whenever this is done the horse instantly becomes quiet, and a repetition of the blindfolding two or three times, gradually results in his becoming quiet and docile. Such an arrangement would be a valuable appendage to the headgear of horses disposed to run away.

No lands can be preserved in a high state of fertility, unless clover and the grasses are cultivated in the course of rotation.

A MISTAKE OFTEN MADE.—Boys and men sometimes start out in life with the idea that one's business depends on sharpness and chicanery. They imagine if a man is able always to 'get the best of a bargain,' no matter by what deceit and meanness he carries his point, that his prosperity is assured.—This is a great mistake. Enduring prosperity cannot be founded on cunning and dishonesty. The tricky and deceitful man is sure to fall a victim, sooner or later, to the influences which are forever working against him. His house is built upon the sand, and its foundation will be certain to give way. Young people cannot give these truths too much weight. The future of that young man is safe who eschews every phase of double-dealing, and laps the foundation of his career in the enduring principles of truth.

New York Weekly Herald

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

The circulation of this popular newspaper, has more than trebled during the past year. It contains all the leading news contained in the Daily Herald; and is arranged in handy departments. The embraces special dispatches from all quarters of the globe. Under the head of

FOREIGN NEWS

AMERICAN NEWS

are given the Telegraphic Despatches of the week from all parts of the Union. This feature alone makes the most valuable chronicle in the world, as it is the cheapest. Every week is given a faithful report of embracing complete and comprehensive despatches from Washington, including full reports of the speeches of eminent politicians on the questions of the hour.

THE WEEKLY HERALD

POLITICAL NEWS

THE FARM DEPARTMENT

of the Weekly Herald gives the latest as well as the most practical suggestions and discoveries relating to the duties of the farmer, hints for raising Cattle, Poultry, Grains, Trees, Vegetables, &c., &c., with suggestions for keeping buildings and farming utensils in repair. This is supplemented by a well-edited department, widely copied, under the head of giving recipes for practical dishes, hints for making clothing and for keeping up with the latest fashions at the lowest price. Every item of cooking or economy suggested in this department is practically tested by experts before publication. Letters from our Paris and London correspondents on the very latest fashions. The Home Department of the Weekly Herald will save the housewife more than one hundred times the price of the paper. The interests of

SKILLED LABOR

are looked after, and everything relating to mechanics and labor saving is carefully recorded. There is a page devoted to all the latest phases of the business markets, Crops, Merchandise, &c. A valuable feature is found in the specially reported prices and conditions of

THE PRODUCE MARKET

Sporting News at home and abroad, together with a Story every week, a Sermon by some eminent divine, Literary, Musical, Dramatic, Personal and Sea Notes. There is no paper in the world which contains so much news matter every week as the weekly Herald, which is sent, postage free, for One Dollar. You can subscribe at any time.
